Trying Cases Outside of Philadelphia Isn't So Bad

Date | October 31, 2017

Dion Rassias recently obtained a settlement with a lifetime value of over $10 million in a brain damage case on behalf of a woman who was involved in a car accident and then subsequently mistreated at a rural Pennsylvania hospital. Despite the hospital's attempts to avoid producing complete records throughout discovery, Dion was able to obtain the plaintiff's entire chart as well as the electronic audit trail behind the records. This critical information helped to prove that the plaintiff's brain injury was caused by a hospital nurse's failure to adequately monitor the patient's condition. Even though medical malpractice cases have been difficult to win outside of Philadelphia County, Dion has won a settlement or a verdict in every medical malpractice case he has developed and tried across numerous counties throughout Pennsylvania. Case selection and pre-complaint workup are the key to winning outside of Philadelphia; when good cases are filed, and then vigorously developed and properly focused, juries everywhere understand and produce outstanding results.
